THE LIVELY LIFE OF FRED FUNSTON

A SCRAP ABOVE ALL THINGS

HIS FIRST EXPLOIT WAS IN DEFENDING HIS FATHER.

Missed Being Appointed to West Point by His Father and then Went to College—Didn't Do Well and Took to Journalism and Got his Paper Into Trouble.

Brigadier General Funston went to the Philippines as colonel in the Twentieth Kansas when the war there first began. After many heroic deeds, leading his regiment to many victories, he was mustered out and returned to this country, where on October 20, he was appointed a brigadier general of volunteers and returned to the Philippines.

Frederick Funston is the son of a fighter says the New York Press, in reciting some the interesting facts about the little hero. His father entered the civil war as lieutenant in the Sixteenth Ohio battery, and served throughout the war, participating in many of the engagements along the Mississippi river. With many other Ohio men, he moved to Kansas soon after the war and engaged in farming. He got into politics in the early 70's and was elected successively to both branches of the legislature and to congress.

It was while serving as a national representative that he acquired the sobriquet of "Foghorn," which has clung to him ever since, and refers to the quality of his voice. His only son, Frederick, at an early age took an interest in his father's campaigns, less because he cared for politics than because they gave him a good chance to "scrap" with the sons of men who were opposed politically to his father. He ran into a political meeting at Fort Scott, Kan., when he was sixteen years old, and that gave him an opportunity to prove his mettle.

The speakers were assailing his father with all the force and venom that characterize campaign orators and Fred listened with close if not respectful attention. When the speaker had finished he said that he had afew remarks to make about "Foghorn" Funston, and as he knew him pretty well, they might be worth hearing. The crowd thought otherwise, but Fred carried his point and began to tell funny stories about his father until the crowd was in a humor to listen to what ever he might say.

Then he got in a political speech, and although the leaders tried to stop him, he kept right on and carried his audience with him. This was his first political speech and his first public scrap. He wanted to be a real soldier, and he begged his father to appoint him to a cadetship at West Point. He was told that he could have it if he won in the competitive examination. Confident that he could make a first rate officer, Fred had no doubt of the issue, and went into the examination with the idea that he would come out of it with a West Point apointment.

But there was a farmer's son who had paid more attention to books and less to scraps who easily outclassed young Funston and got the appointment. Lieuenant Crawford he is now, and has sailed with the Twenty-first infantry for Manila, where he may be assigned to Funston's brigade.

Disappointed in his West Point ambitions, Funston entered Kansas State University. He was not fond of grinding at his books, and although he did not wholly "slump," he made no record as a scholar, and did not take a degree. He entered into college sports with zest, and was known as a fellow who was ready for anything in the way of excitement. He couldn't yell much for the college, because his voice was too soft and mild for that,but he could hit it up with the best of them for "Old Jayhawk." In the struggle between "town and gown" Funston was alwoys conspicuous among the student forces.

One night a big darky bully known as "Bad Bill" set forth, with his razor in hand, to clear the streets of any students who might be abroad. People were accustomed to let "Bad Bill" have his way when he started out on an errand of that sort, but Fred was not of that mind; so, when he came face to face with the bully who was fully twice his size, instead of running from him, he rushed upon him, and, drawing a revolver from his pocket said: "I don't want to hurt you, but if you don't drop that razor, I'll shot." Bill stopped in sheer amazement and started to back.

"Stop!" piped little Funston. The negro obeyed, and the boy marched him off to prison, where he was locked up for the night and fined the next day.

That settled it for the negro, but Fred Funston had more trouble ahead. The university faculty objected to the sudents carrying firearms and forbade Funston from doing so in the future. He treated this rule with calm indifference and only his father's influence saved him from expulsion.

When he left college, voluntarily, he tried his hand at newspaper work, that seeming to offer as good an opportunity as any in sight for scraps. He got a position on the Fort Smith (Ark.) Tribune, but found the work humdrum until his editor-in-chief went away and gave him a chance to express his opinions in an editorial, and ,as these opinions happened to be contrary to the policy of the paper and to the views of the majority of the townspeople, they created a lively and general indignation an dthe threat was made that the Tribune building should be burned, as it doubtless would have been if the editor had not returned in the nick of time to save the situation and dismiss Funston form his office.

"I thought it would turn out that way," coolly observed the young man, "but I hated the job, my boarding house and the town, and I thought I might as well stir things up and have a little fun before I left."

Funston was out of a job for sometime thereafter; then he became a railroad conductor on the Santa Fe line. In that capacity he had some fun with the cowboys. When they started out to run the train and to run things their own way they found a small but determined young man, who enforced his objections by a means which was an improvement on their own.

One time he was not satisfied with driving a bumptious cowboy from the train, but stopped the train while he pursued him for a long distance. For this he was reprimanded by the superintendent, and concluding that with such restrictions railroading was too slow, he gave it up.

Soon afterwars he got a job in the agricultural department, but that was still less to his liking, and he welcomed the offer to accomapny a botanical expedittion to Dekota, and later a geologgical expedition to Death Valley, in southern California. He didn't know much about botany or geology to start with, but he knew how to achieve the ends that he set out for, and the department was delighted with his success.

The hardships of the trip had proven too much for half of the exploring party, but Funston thrived on them. He marched through Death Valley with a company of greasy Shoshones, and when he came out the only accurate survey of that region ever made was completed.

On one occasion the party was lost for some time in the sterile labyrinths of the district and nearly perished of thirst. Aside from his officials duties Funston made some interesting anthropological observations, which he afterwards wrote up for the magazines.

He again drifted into newpaper work in Kansas City, but was out of it again in a few months.

In 1892 he was sent to Alaska, where he arrived in a blizzard, passed alone over the Chilkoot Pass, built a canoe in which he paddled down to where Dawson City now is, was overturned on the way in the rapids, but was rescued by a missionary; spent the winter in an Indian village, and the next summer went on to the ocean. In two years from the time he had started he returned to Washington.

Where Was Pete?

Uncle Si, the author of the poetry which appeared in The Telegram some time ago, about loading of drunks in a dray by Peter Wagstaff, on "South Ellum" should have been on West Market about noon today. Pete's services were much in demand but no Pete was near. In lieu thereof, by actual count, five white men were necessary to load one drunken man into a wagon. He was from the country and was returned home.

The Kind of Man Needed.

To the Editor of The Telegram:

Greensboro is distinctively progressive and aggresive in her business principles, and in the conduct of her affairs municipal requires the services of men throughly wide awake and on the alert to promote the material interests, established as well as to look after new enterprises. A clean administration is essentially important, and in the selection of the Mayor we know of no one who could more fittingly and competently discharge the many duties of the office than Mr. C. G. Wright. He is a energetic, pushing man, a factor in the upbuilding of the city, and possesses clear conceptions of fairness and justice.

It will be, we trust, Mayor Wright.

INTERESTED VOTERS.

SATISFIED, SAYS AGUINALDO.

SAID SO WHEN THE OATH OF ALLEGIANCE WAS TAKEN.

He May Visit the United States Later—Desires That Insurgent Funds Should Be Devoted to Education of Filipino Youth.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Manila, April 3.—When Aguinaldo took the oath of allegiance administered by Chief Justice Arrellano, the Filipino leader exclaimed: "I am satfied with America."

Aguinaldo is preparing a manifesto calling for an end to the war. The insurgents' funds captured by the United States, it is Aguinaldo's wish should be devoted to the education of Filipino youth. Aguinaldo may visit the United States later.

THE OATH.

A Washington dispatch says that the oath taken by Aguinaldo is as follows:

"I, ——, hereby renounce all allegiance to any and all so-called revolutionary governments in the Philippine Islands and recognize and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America therein. I do solemnly swear that I will bear true faith and allegiance to that government; that I will at all times conduct myself as a faithful and law-abiding citizen of the said islands and will not, either directly or indirectly, hold correspondence with or give intelligence to an enemy of the United States, nor will I aber, harbor or protect such enemy; that I impose upon myself these voluntary obligation without any mental reservations or purpose of evasion, so help me God."

General MacArthur's dispatch contained much more than was given to the public. The portion withheld relating to the future disposition of Aguinaldo and made suggestions as to what the late chief of the insurrection might accomplish. No official statement could be obtained as to what finally would be done with the prisoner, but it was emphatically stated that he would be held for the present, but would be granted all possible immunity consistent with existing conditions.

Ran Away from Orphanage.

Yesterday about noon Officer Jordan saw a strange boy about the station and upon inquiring of him his home the boy answered that he was from High Point, and that his name was Samuel Howrell. Mr. Jordan knowing that no such family lived in High Point, at once surmised that he had run away, and closely questioned him,when the boy told the whole story. He said he had run away from the Thomasville Orphanage and that his home is in Scotland Neck, that his father was dead but his mother was living, and that he was going home. Being asked why he ran away he said he had been whipped because he did not know his geography lesson.

A phone mesage was sent to the Orphanage and they requested that the boy be held and sent to them. This was done and the boy was returned last night.

CONFESSES WITHOUT A QUIVER IN HIS VOICE

Jones, Rice's Murderer, Talks Like He Isn't a Bit Sorry.

New York, April 2.—Without the slightest quiver in his well-modulated voice and displaying no outward sign of regret or remorse, Chas. E. Jones, secretary and valet to the late Wm. Marsh Rice, today confessed under oath that he had ended the life of his employer and benefactor with chloroform.

The confession was the climax of a remarkable recital, in which was laid bare the details of an alleged subtle conspiracy which had for its object the seizure of $3,000,000 in cash and negotiable securities and the conversion of $3,000,000 in realty to the uses of the alleged chief conspirator. There was a dramatic force in the directness and minute attention to detail with which Jones approached the tragedy—the moment when he covered the face of the sleeping man with the saturated napkin and then waited for him to die. The self-confessed murderer told the story of the alleged plot from its inception.

The capital crime he committed and all the minor offenses that preceded it were, he declared, at the instigation and direction of Albert T. Patrick. it was Patrick, he said, who conceived the idea of forging a will and forging transfers and conveyances. It was Patrick who determined that Rice should die, and it was Patrick who sought to have him killed slowly and then, becoming impatient, determined upon quick action. And, according to Jones, remarkable as it may seem, Rice never knew Patrick during his life time and never saw him but once.

According to this remarkable confession, Patrick told Jones that the old man was lasting too long, that he must be put out of the way at once, that Jones should do the work and that there would really be no harm in it because Rice had poisoned his own wife years ago and deserved punishment.

Jones described his return to Mr. Rice's apartments and the discovery of the millionaire sleeping peacefully in bed; he told of his stealthy search for a napkin and the fashioning of it into a cone shape as directed, he said, by Patrick. He detailed the story of the pinning of a small sponge at the point of the cone. Then he told of the saturating the napkin and sponge with chloroform and holding it over his own nostrils to test its effect. Jones looked straight in the eyes of Assitant District Attorney Osborne and continued his story without a break, without a tremor in his voice. He described his approach to the bed with the napkin in his hand; of the flight from the room; of the weary wait of thirty minutes in accordance with Patrick's alleged instructions; at the expiration of the half hour he returned and found Rice dead. He then threw open the windows to free the room from the odor of chloroform, telephoned to Patrick that Rice was dead, sent for a physician and then, after expressing his grief at the loss of so good and kind an employer, he said he went to bed and fell into a sound sleep.

Patrick, accused by the witness of being the arch-criminal listened to the witness with attention and occasionally made notes of the testimony. Not even the remarkable witness on the stand was more cool, calm and collected than this remarkable prisoner. Patrick's hand was firm and steady. He displayed neither, anger, fear nor resentment. When Jones reached the description of the murder of the sleeping man Patrick merely stroked his beard and leaned back in his chair, apparently slightly bored by the recital of the details.

Mrs. Francis, with whom Patrick boarded at the time Rice died, preceded Jones on the witness stand. She was called to identify two telegrams from J. M. Coleman, Houston, Texas, addressed to Patrick and to tell of some "grayish white" pills which the prisoner was taking for malaria.

A Guilford Man Stirs Up Some Shooting.

Winston Journal.

There was a very lively time in Kernersville Saturday night during which there were, it is said, over one hundred pistol shots fired and all caused by one man who had gotten on a spre and decided to have some fun.

The person caused all this commotion was a white man named George Brown from Guilford County. He walked in a store at Kernersville about 8 o'clock and purchased a pistol remarking at the same time that he would have occasion to use it very soon. Just after leaving the store he drew the pistol and began firing in the ground. The chief of police went up to arrest him and he ran and began firing back. Our information is that at least fifty men joined in the chase after Brown and that there were over one hundred shots fired at him, Brown at the same time firing back at the crowd. He escaped to the woods but re turned later at night when several more shots were fired.

We understand that Brown returned to Kernersville and left word, there was a shot gun at Dean Bros. saw mill in Guilford county where he worked and he could give them some more fun down there. He was not apprehended.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3.

FUNSTON'S FORGERY.

A good many people are more or less criticising the means employed by General Funston in his daring capture of the Filipino chieftain, Aguinaldo. Such criticism would at first appear just, but is it? The criticism is based upon the fact that the name of one of Aguinaldo's lieutenants was forged in so perfect a way as to completely deceive the wily geurilla and enable Funston and his band to get in striking distance of the secluded leader, where, after a hot fight, he was captured. This appears to us to be a perfectly legitimate way of overcoming a foe. True, such methods of carrying a point would be neither moral nor honorable in any of the pursuits of peace, but it must be recollected that in time of war the rules which govern conduct in time of peace do not obtain. The very existence of war is a notification to the enemy to be on his guard all the time. Vigils are supposed to be constantly kept, and a prudent general is ever on the lookout for stealthy attack, and since the days when the Greeks, concealed within the fabulous horse, were pushed inside the Tojan walls, it has been admitted that everything is fair in war. Certainly deception is a prime element of strategy. The difference in the deception employed by Washington in leaving his camp fires burning to deceive the enemy and that practiced by Funston in using a forged signature to throw his enemy off his guard is less real than imaginary.

Funston's exploit was certainly the most romantic and daring, if not actually the most useful in results that has occurred since the war with Spain began.

The State press has commented with much favor on the assertion of The Telegram that the Democrats have shown that they really desired peace and that if the Republicans desired it as they claimed, they might obtain it by stopping the persecution of the Democratic registrars and ceasing to fight the amendment. Will the Republicans do so?

Judging from what Prof. Brown, the Guilford man, accomplished at Kernersville with his pistol, we are of the opinion that if he succeeds in reaching Dean Bros.' saw mill and getting his shot gun, something will happen.

We have heard that the Jefferson was claimed to be fireproof, but now the insurance agents say it was a perfect fire trap. Whichever one of these reports is true it does not lessen the truth of the injunction never to believe all one hears.

We warn the esteemed Concord Standard that in bucking the prevalent faith in lightning rods it has assumed a thankless job.

Among the interesting questions before the public now may be added this one: "Why do a church have to buy vinegar?" Dr. Wyche was compelled to askthat question yesterday when he was presented with some bills for West Market Street church and found among them one for six gallons of vinegar. The clerk certified that the vinegar had been bought for the church but was not sure of what it was used for. It stumped Dr. Wyche, who will confer with the committee on the subject.

THE DEAKIN' ON HOSS-TRADIN'

Well, yes, you take it fust an' last, I s'pose I've made it pay
A-tradin' hosses; anyhow, so all the neighbors say;
They've kind o' got the notion that if I jest git a look
At any sort o' hossflesh I c'n read it like a book.
An' on the other hand they think that if a hoss is mine,
No matter how played out he is, I make him look that fine
His mother wouldn't know him; but, right here 'twixt me an' you
The man don't live but what some hoss c'n teach him somethin' new.

A hoss is that deceivin' that I don't pertend to know
His kinks till I've perused him fer at least a month er so;
He's got a thousand diff'rent ways, er so it seems to me,
Fer teachin' us we ain't so smart as what we think we be.
Before the trade you try him an' you test him wind and limb,
An' do your best, you can't make out a thing that's wrong with him,
But once the trade's completed, then—an' don't it make you hot!—
He jogs your mind with somethin' that you shouldn't have fergot.

They say in tradin' hosses that there ain't a man so high
An' pure an' true an' noblelike but what he'll tell a lie;
But when you speak o' liars, why, from what I c'n recall,
I take the hoss himself to be the biggest one o' all.
Fer don't he do his level best in every way he can
To supplement the wicked words o' some designin' man?
A human bein' ain't persumed to stick to what is true,
But when a hoss acts out a lie, say, what's a man to do!

Now what I'm gettin' at is this; a hoss, if he finds out
You think o' tradin' fer him, will let on he's fresh an' stout,
An' speedylike an' willin', an' so good from top to toe
He'll make you give a lot to boot before you'll let him go.
But when he's yours, oh, sufferin' saints! the way that hoss lets down,
Until he looks to be about the wust old nag in town!
He'll balk an' bite an' run away an' bring you sech distress
That could you cheat somebody, would you do it? Well, I guess!

At fust this attymobile—the new-fangled thing they've got
Fer doin' 'way with hosses—sort o' worried me a lot,
But since I'm gettin' on in years an' h'ain't got long to stay,
Now that the hoss is goin' I'll be glad to git away.
I've traded hosses all my life, an' 'twouldn't seem jest right
To jog about the highways an' not see a trade in sight.
But there's one thing I wouldn't do fer any mortal price—
That's trade the heaven-sent hoss fer this blamed fact'ry-made device!

MUCH OF LITTLE.

A Queer Sign That May Be Seen Not Many Miles from London.

The stranger in any city half a hundred years old, if he knew anything of the city's history, would learn from many of the signs that the second and third generations had succeeded to the business of father and grandfather. It is especially true of New York. The New York Times mentions some peculiar signs, and relates the following, which we take to be true, although we do not vouch for it:

A Londoner, who had strolled about the streets of the city with a New Yorker who called his attention to some of the signs of sons, agreed that in this respect New York was very like London, but in neither city was there any such sign as he saw in one of the old English towns a few hours' run from the world's metropolis. The sign reads:

JOHN LITTLEJOHN'S SONS AND LITTLE (LITTLE LITTLEJOHN, DOOLITTLE LITTLEJOHN AND JOHN LITTLE).

According to the Londoner, the first Littlejohn and Little were partners. the former gave his first son his partner's family name, and Little gave his boy his partner's Christian name. Littlejohn's second son was named, for his mother's family, Doolittle. The three sons succeeded to their fathers' business, hence the sign is entirely correct, and the Londoner was right in saying that the successors had no invention of being "funny" when they had their sign written as it appears.

Told the Time by Taste.

A strange clock was made during the last century for a French nobleman. The dial was horizontal, and the figures, being hollow, were filled with different sweets of spices. Thus, running his finger along the hand, by tasting, the owner could tell the hour without a light.

Had the Best of It.

Tommy Atkins had taken a Boer prisoner, and, the two getting friendly, talked about the prospects of the war. "You may as well give it up; you will never win," said the Boer. "'Cos why?" asked Tommy. "Because we've the Lord on our side," said the Boer. "G'arn," said Tommy, with great contempt, "why, we've three lords on our side, and one of 'em's made a bloomin' hass of himself!"—Chicago Chronicle.

CANCER

Sufferers from this horrible malady nearly always inherit it—not necessarily from the parents, but may be from some remote ancestor, for Cancer often runs through several generations. This deadly poison may lay dormant in the blood for years, or until you reach middle life, then the first little sore or ulcer makes its appearance—or a swollen gland in the breast, or some other part of the body, gives the first warning.

To cure Cancer thoroughly and permanently all the poisonous virus must be eliminated from the blood—every vestage of it driven out. This S. S. S. does, and is the only medicine that can reach deep-seated, obstinate blood troubles like this. When all the poison has been forced out of the system the Cancer heals, and the disease never returns.

Cancer begins often in a small way, as the following letter from Mrs. Shirer shows:

A small pimple came on my jaw about an inch below the ear on the left side of my face. It gave me no pain or inconvenience, and I should have forgotten about it had it not begun to inflame and itch; it would bleed a little, then scab over, but would not heal. This continued for some time, when my jaw began to swell, becoming very painful. The Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was as large as a half dollar, when I heard of S. S. S. and determined to give it a fair trial, and it was remarkable what a wonderful effect it had from the very beginning; the sore began to heal and after taking a few bottles disappeared entirely. This was two years ago; there are still no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good.—MRS. R. SHIRER, La Plata, Mo.

AN ANCIENT BELIEF

The ancients believed that rheumatism was the work of a demon within a man. Any one who has had an attack of siatic or inflammatory rheumatism will agree that the affliction is demoniac enough to warrant the belief. It has never been claimed that Chamberlain's Pain Balm would cast out demons, but it will cure rheumatism, and hundreds bear testimony to the truth of this statement. One application relieves the pain, and this quick relief which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by C. E. Holton, Druggist.

Wrote that He Was Dead.

A laughable incident occurred in the Federal Court this afternoon which furnished some fun in which Judge Boyd and the whole court indulged. A witness from Stokes county was asked where a certain man was, and replied:

"He's in Missoury I rec'on. He run away from last court here and went by home and got his mules, and went to Missoury. When he got there he wrote back and told his wife that he was dead."

Kimball Instruments

Do you not want a Piano which is so famous in the pleasant home, in the social entertainments, at the political gatherings, and last, but not least, on all occasions in the famous churches and institutions throughout the land? Below is given a testimony of the Chairman of the Jury of Award at the World's Fair, in which is included, also, that of the manager of an institution whose renown is world-wide:

DEAR SIR:—Your esteemed favor received. Dr. Ziegfeld is at present taking a vacation abroad and I take the liberty of answering your communication. This institution is furnished throughout with Kimball Pianos, no other being used, and we can give this instrument our qualified endorsement.

Dr. Ziegfeld was Chairman of the Jury of Award at the World's Fair, and had an opportunity of examining every instrument exhibited. This, with his experience in the musical world for more than 35 years, led him to select the Kimball Piano for the college.

For school purposes and for concert use they give us perfect satisfaction. They are equally perfect in tone, action and durability; and to anyone contemplating the purchase of a Piano we highly recommend the Kimball.

Very respectfully yours,
CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE.
[Signed] W. K. ZIEGFELD, Manager.

We are offering the instruments at prices and on terms to suit any and all: $20 cash and 4 per cent. a month buys any instrument we have in stock. Call and see us. If you can't come in the day come at night. Our doors are open until 10 p. m.
